GO!

EMPOWER THE MISSION OF NCJW:

A FAITH IN THE FUTURE: A BELIEF IN ACTION.

VOTE ON TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 7!

WHERE WE GO FROM HERE

Given that all elections are referendums on representative government, the stakes are especially high. According to FairDistricts PA, a non-partisan citizen-led group, our state has the most egregious gerrymandering in the country. Voices of voters have been nullified by the redistricting created by our state legislatures. (Go to fairdistrictspa.com for more information). FairDistrictsPA's goal hinges on a change to the state constitution before the next redistricting to take place after the 2020 census. That means action is needed now! A substantial voter turnout will send a strong message to our legislators.

Courts matter in this election. To illustrate, it was the Vermont State Supreme Court which ruled that the state's prohibition on same-sex marriage violated that state's constitution. In North Carolina a lower court ruled in 2013 that the voter ID law was unconstitutional and discriminated against blacks. The state legislators' response was a plan to take up redistricting in January and end judicial elections altogether giving the assembly the power to appoint judges, in effect politicizing judges.

President's Message

As we conclude the month of our Jewish Holidays, we now start anew. Sitting in the Sukkah which represents the harvest, I reflected about what it is that I will be harvesting this coming year and what we, in NCJW, will be harvesting. I feel so grateful to harvest my family, my NCJW sisters, and now new relationships with so many of you.

Each day, I see how hard our volunteers and advocates work to reach out to all of you and to our coalition partners, as they work to educate, advocate, plan and offer community service to those in need. Our Board of Directors did not hesitate to send funds to help the victims of both hurricanes and now we will be helping the people of Puerto Rico. Along with many of you, we put together school back packs for the children of our adopted Philadelphia Ben Franklin Elementary School. I am proud to say that the number of volunteers tutoring in that school has increased due to the hard work of our PACS Vice Presidents: Susan Horwitz and Charlotte Schwartz.

Harvesting the growth of our monthly programs are our Program Vice Presidents: Joyce Eveloff, Char Kurland and Margie Zukerman, who organized an incredible opening program about WOMEN IN POLITICS. How empowering that was and judging by the turnout and reaction of so many of you, we can look forward to many more exciting programs.

A newly harvested project, one of its kind, was brought to our community by volunteers and advocates who put their time, energy and soul into providing our community a FREE outreach/educational program entitled, "You Be the Judge," with keynote speaker, the Honorable Marjorie O. Rendell. This evening program offered everyone an opportunity to understand how our federal judiciary works and how and why it is so vital to our lives. Once again, NCJW took the lead, and recruited like-minded coalition partners and sponsors who joined in creating this important project. All of us are grateful to the committee, Chaired by Eleanor Levy. Each member of this committee played an essential role in making this event successful. They are: Linda Lempert, our Legislative Chair, Lynne Jacobs, our State Policy Advocate and member of the NCJW National Board of Directors, Charlotte Schwartz, VP and Harriet Winokur, our Financial Secretary. We also thank coalition partners, Kadida Kenner from Why Courts Matter-PA and Kathy Beveridge, representing the Bucks County Women's Advocacy Coalition for their work on this committee. We always are grateful to Zelda Stern, who for seven years now, has been harvesting our Ronald McDonald Guest Chef Breakfasts at St. Christopher's Hospital for Children. What a Mitzvah this is to support and meet the families whose children are hospitalized.

Joan Sax and Lee Tonik, worked so hard to bring so many of you to the Museum of the American Revolution as part of our Taste of Culture programs. We thank them and Patti First, Fund Raising VP, for everything they do to keep our section strong.

Before long, we will be celebrating American Thanksgiving. Again, we will sit around tables with families and friends and be grateful for all we have. Let us continue to do what we can to see the results of our NCJW harvest, as we continue to provide for our communities. Thank YOU and I wish you a lovely Thanksgiving Holiday

A TUTORIAL FOR THE BALLOT BOX FROM OUR LEGISLATIVE CHAIR

Nov. 7 Ballot Question, courtesy of the PA League of Women Voters with added comments and notes from Linda Lempert, NCJW legislative chair

“Shall the Pennsylvania Constitution be amended to permit the General Assembly to enact legislation authorizing local taxing authorities to exclude from taxation up to 100 percent of the assessed value of each homestead property with a local taxing jurisdiction, rather than limit the exclusion to one-half of the median assessed value of all homestead property, which is the existing law?” Yes or no.

Note: Did you have trouble understanding the language of the ballot question, which is written for someone who has 18 years of education? Even if you have that much education, the legal jargon is overwhelming. Homestead? Why didn't they just say house?

This amendment modifies the constitutional requirement that all commercial property and homes be treated the same and it would be a first step in any effort to eliminate property taxation for homeowners altogether.

The amendment does not by itself eliminate property taxes, it merely authorizes the House of Representatives to enact implementing legislation giving local taxing authorities — county, municipal and/or school — the option to do so.

Note: Local governments have had the ability for two decades to exclude up to one half of the assessed value of their homes from the property tax. This ballot question would allow local authorities to eliminate up to 100% of the assessed value.

Note: Revenue from any property taxes eliminated in this manner must be made up through other means: i.e. state income taxes, sales taxes, sewer taxes....

Any alternative tax scheme requiring increases in income taxes and/or sales taxes would necessarily benefit senior citizens living on fixed incomes whose earning days are behind them while putting much more of the tax burden on young working families and in the case of a sales tax increase, on the poor.

Proponents say the amendment would be the first step in changing the system so that an inability to pay property taxes could never again result in the loss of homes that people have worked their whole lives to pay for.

Opponents say that the amendment allows taxing authorities to replace a stable tax source (property) with unstable ones (income and sales taxes) that fluctuate with the economy and could be subject to legislative manipulation.

Additionally, opponents fear that allowing districts to eliminate property taxation could lead to a loss of local control of education and to a significantly diminishing commitment to public education.

Note* So, what does this actually mean? A yes vote would amend the PA Constitution clearing the way for legislators to totally eliminate the property tax for homeowners. Although this sounds good on the surface, it would totally strip funds that pay for teachers, police and firemen. As of now, the state funds a little over 40% of any given school district's budget. That leaves local communities to make-up for what the State doesn't provide. Without a way to levy taxes, local school districts will not be able to meet the educational needs of their communities. Providing a way for communities to eliminate property taxes without providing an alternative reliable source of funding for local schools is irresponsible. Our PA state legislature has yet to pass a responsible revenue source for the budget as of this date. Opening the door to totally eliminating property taxes does nothing more than destroy public education.

Why the Judges we vote for in Pennsylvania Courts matter

On September 28, 2017 the Supreme Court of PA issued a landmark decision. It ordered the PA Commonwealth Court* to hold a full trial on Pennsylvania's school funding lawsuit. The Court agreed with the plaintiffs that education funding should be subject to judicial review. It ruled that the courts have a duty to ensure that the state's school funding system does not violate the state constitution or discriminate against students because of where they live or the wealth of their communities. This decision is a major help for public schools in PA. This trial will give families the opportunity to share their stories of how the deprivation in school caused by PA's grossly inadequate and discriminatory school funding system harms children throughout the commonwealth. This trial will shine a bright public light on the absolute failure of the Pennsylvania legislature to provide all school children with the resources they need in their classrooms.

GREATER PHILADELPHIA SECTION of NCJW SPONSORS INTERACTIVE PROGRAM, “YOU BE THE JUDGE”

On October 17, 120 participants experienced first-hand what it is like to decide an important case that impacts our rights and way of life. Attendees served as panels of ‘judges’, including a “Chief Justice”. Each panel examined and discussed the validity of a Wisconsin law requiring residents to present photo IDs in order to vote, and handed down a verdict. The panels were then apprised of the actual verdict handed down by the District Court and the Court of Appeals. By evening’s end the crucial roles of the courts and their jurists were clear to all. “Judges who are appointed to the federal bench with their lifetime appointments will make decisions that will affect us, our children, and our grandchildren,” noted Eleanor Levie, a volunteer advocate for the National Council of Jewish Women (NCJW). One of the program’s featured speakers was Judge Marjorie O. Rendell of the US Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, which includes Pennsylvania., Judge Rendell differentiated the court’s function as “a mouthpiece for the rule of law”, from “the job of the legislative branch”, “which is to do the will of the people”. She addressed the importance of judges being empathetic and the benefit of diversity with regards to gender, race and past professional experience on the Bench.

Participants also heard from Kadida Kenner of WHY COURTS MATTER-PA., who addressed the process for federal judicial nominations whereby a president names his nominees and the senate is obligated to advise and consent-or dissent. She expressed an urgency for vigilance in wake of the recent nomination of judges based in Minnesota and Michigan without the consultation of their senators, which serves to undercut bi-partisanship and support extremism. This successful and remarkable event was due to the combined efforts of NCJW-Greater Philadelphia Section with Why Courts Matter-PA and the Bucks County Women’s Advocacy Coalition. Other co-sponsors included the Women’s Law Project; the League of Women Voters of Abington, Cheltenham and Jenkintown; Reform Congregation Keneseth Israel; Salem Baptist Church of Jenkintown; American Constitution Society for Law and Policy, Philadelphia Lawyer Chapter; NAACP--PA State Conference; the Women’s Center of Montgomery County; and the Jewish Federation of Greater Philadelphia’s Jewish Community Relations Council. It earned this tribute by Betsy Levinson: “This evening of learning was A#1 in every way. It underscored my many reasons for having joined NCJW”. Through BenchMark NCJW’s Judicial Nominations Campaign, grassroots volunteers and advocates have been a leading voice in the progressive community’s fight to put its mark on the bench, ensuring a fair and independent judiciary with an unwavering commitment to constitutional rights.

NCJW of Greater Philadelphia Israel Advocacy Report to the Board June 13, 2017

While in Israel during May, 2017, I visited two organizations supported by NCJW. Following is a summary of these encounters.

Jerusalem Open House for Pride and Tolerance, <http://www.joh.org.il/>, 2 Hasoreq St., Jerusalem, May 29, 2017. This is the LGBT activist organization which is supported by NCJW. The House is in an office building in a very attractive section of the center of Jerusalem, not far from the Old City, City Hall, and Yaffo Street. I was received by Nadar Schwartz, the Coordinator for Education and Community. He gave me a tour of the House and described the kind of outreach work being done in schools, both secular and religious, and in the community in general. The organization also provides social, educational, crisis intervention, counseling, and housing services (very short term) on the premises. At the time of my visit, there were two people in the "Living Room" just relaxing. Nadar was aware of the support being provided by NCJW and expressed his and the organization's appreciation for it.

Women Wage Peace, <http://womenwagepeace.org.il/en/>, May 30, 2017. This is an NCJW-supported Israeli social action group advocating for a peace settlement. Frequent events and demonstrations are held at various locations throughout the country. I attended an Erev Shavuot study night (<http://womenwagepeace.org.il/en/study-evening-tikun-leil-shavuot/>, held in a lovely and hospitable home in Jerusalem. The topics selected for study, from Torah, stories, and song, related to parts played by women that made a positive difference in the world. The organizers (Hamutal Guri - Pres. and event leader, Ahuva Tamar Batz - hostess and singer, Roni Yavin - officer, story teller and my gracious chauffeur) and all who contributed to the program were very knowledgeable and expert in the areas of which they spoke. The evening was most impressive, the discussions lively, the attendance great, and it ended reluctantly at around 4:00 a.m. Expressions of appreciation for NCJW's support were numerous.

“Uprooted” Born in an internment camp for Japanese Americans, she fears Muslims face a similar fate.

Teresa Maebori’s parents spent a year imprisoned at the Tule Lake concentration camp in California, with 19,000 other Japanese Americans, before they were sent to a farm labor camp in Idaho. Their daughter, Teresa, was born there in 1945. Teresa, a teacher for 36 years at Germantown Friends School, never forgot what her family endured and sees a similar situation of hate being experienced, in the anti-Muslim sentiment today.
