PROGRAM

ENDING SEX TRAFFICKING-A National NCJW Priority

Learn about efforts to combat human trafficking with our speakers' panel featuring:
Sister Terry Shields, President and one of the Founders of Dawn's Place
Liz Robbins: Reporter for the Metropolitan section of the NY Times
Lori Cohen: Attorney, NCJW National Board member

Lives that Actively Respect the Lives of Others

On Tuesday, December 15, we have the distinct honor to have on our panel, a woman who has dedicated her life to social justice. Sister Terry Shields, a member of the Missionary Sisters of the Holy Rosary has served some of the most neglected people in some of the world's most desperate regions. She spent several years in Rwanda and the Sudan providing maternal and child health care and supporting feeding programs. Her considerable resume shows that she is energized by challenges that offer direct impact on the lives of people in need. Sister Terry has embraced many and diverse mission assignments including school nursing, nursing home supervision, Emergency Medical Relief Team work, nurse midwife, refugee services, and more. Sister Shield's present ministry is President and co-founder of Dawn's Place, the only shelter in eastern Pennsylvania for women trafficked for commercial sex. The shelter offers its clients a sense of community, essential services and the opportunity to make changes in their lives.

Liz Robbins has been a reporter at the New York Times for 15 years, the last five in the Metro section. Currently, she covers immigration, chronicling legal, social and cultural issues concerning immigrants across the city. Last December, she published a story about the human trafficking court in Queens, a unique program that treats women arrested for prostitution as victims, not criminals. Liz is a former sportswriter who covered tennis, the Olympics and the NBA. She is also the author of the 2008 critically acclaimed book about the New York City Marathon, A Race Like No Other: 26 miles Through the Streets of New York. She grew up in Philadelphia, graduating from Friends' Central School. She now calls the Upper West Side home, where she lives with her journalist husband, Ricardo Reif.

Lori Cohen is Director of the Anti-Trafficking Initiative at Sanctuary for Families, Center for Battered Women's Legal Services in New York, where she represents immigrant and domestic victims of human trafficking and conducts training sessions for law enforcement, legal and health care professionals, social service providers and faith and community based organizations. She has lectured on trafficking matters across the US, Mexico and Russia. In 2013, Ms. Cohen chaired: "We Were Slaves: The Jewish Community Unites Against Sex Trafficking," co-sponsored by NCJW NY Section and a coalition of New York-based Jewish and anti-domestic violence organizations. Cohen's work on behalf of trafficking victims has been reported widely in the media, including the NY Times, the BBC and Telemundo, and was most recently featured in Newsweek magazine's cover story, "Sex Slaves in America" published in February 2015. Ms. Cohen is a national board member of the National Council of Jewish Women, where she chairs NCJW's Trafficking Advisory Board; and AVODAH: The Jewish Service Corps. Ms. Cohen is a lifetime member of NCJW New York section, and a graduate of Yale College and Yale Law School.

The Rubye's Kids Story

In 1994, Roz Weiss and her chiropractor husband, Dr. Don Weiss, had the idea of providing a special day of joy at holiday time for underprivileged children. After being turned down by many organizations, Roz contacted Rubye Caesar, a woman who was dedicated to supporting less fortunate children in North Philadelphia. Together they hosted the first holiday party. Seventy-five children from a local elementary school received a hot meal, a gift, lots of attention and plenty of love!

The Weisses and Rubye planned to have another party the following year. However, in February of 1995, Rubye passed away suddenly. In Rubye's memory, Roz named the event Rubye's Kids Holiday Party. The holiday party has grown to include 500 children from 12 schools and 4 homeless shelters in Philadelphia. The children still receive a hot lunch and a gift and, in addition, a book of their choice, school supplies, t-shirts and numerous other give-a-ways. They have a day of fun and entertainment--activities, a carnival, music, face-painting, clowns and more--and they are surrounded by volunteers offering them unconditional love. The smiles on the children's faces are a gift to all who participate. The need proved great, so the Weisses expanded their horizons and are now helping children all year long. Rubye's Kids, Inc. hosts birthday parties for children living in homeless shelters and creates Rubye's Kids Learning Centers with computers, books and brightly-colored furniture there. Through their Backpack Project, sturdy backpacks filled with school supplies have been given to more than 2,000 children in shelters, and their most recent pilot project, Parting Gifts, offers children who are finally transitioning out of the shelter system items they can use in their new homes. In addition, Rubye's Kids Closets provide essential school supplies for needy children on an ongoing basis in inner-city schools.

Rubye Caesar's spirit lives on and continues to inspire, but help is needed to perpetuate their programs. Funding as well as volunteers are needed.

*NCJW is a grant supporter of Rubye's Kids.

Our volunteer facilitators, drivers and docents make it possible for us to reach hundreds of schools and thousands of students to fulfill our mission “personalizing the Holocaust so that they learn the consequences of racism, ethnic cleansing and intolerance.” They make it possible for our speakers to get to the schools and other locations thus enabling the continued availability of first hand witness testimony. In addition to providing transportation, they carry out arrangements with the host school or location and provide background information about the Holocaust beyond what the testimony includes. Through their facilitation and additional presentation of Holocaust history, the students (and adults) better understand the context of the testimony by our speakers who share their individual and very personal experiences and sacrifices.

Legislative/state public advocacy report for November 2015

Lynne Jacobs, our state public advocate and I attended the “Engaging Faith Communities: Ending Human Trafficking” Event on Thursday Oct.15 when NCJW was featured as the representative of the Jewish community.

1. Senate Bill 851, the anti-sex trafficking “Safe Harbor” Bill, which Lynne and I spoke at length about at our October membership meeting, was passed unanimously by the PA State Senate Judiciary Committee.
2. Efforts now are needed to assure that SB 851 passes the entire floor vote of the PA State Senate. To this end, we urge you to phone and sign postcards that will be available to our members to send to their State senator at both the November and December meetings.
3. We are very pleased with the judicial election results. All three of our preferred candidates for the PA State Supreme Court have won. Despite the typically low turnout at an off-year election, our efforts with our coalition partners of Planned Parenthood to impart to others the importance of the courts and judicial nominees helped the pro-choice candidates prevail.
4. A new tactic for the pro-choice movement is to be pro-active instead of re-active. To that end a new bill, H.R. 2967 “Each Woman Act” has been introduced by U.S representative Jan Schakowsky of Illinois. This bill guarantees equal access to abortion coverage in health care insurance. Please go to the NCJW website www.ncjw.org for more details.
5. I participated in the conference call with congressional representative Jan Schakowsky of Illinois last Thursday regarding H.R. Bill 2967. Since 1976 pro-choice women have meekly accepted “no federal monies to pay for abortion”. That has changed. Basically, H.R. 2967 seeks to overturn both the Hyde and the Helms Amendments. Pro-choice is now on the offense. When this bill was introduced a short while ago, there was an accompanying rally in the capital. According to Schakowsky it was a very and large diverse group in support of the bill: all colors, races and ages were there. As of now, there are 106 co-sponsors, a large number for this short a period of time. Representative Schakowsky thinks that women’s reproductive rights will be a big issue in 2016. This is also a discrimination issue, as only poor and minority women are affected by the Hyde Amendment (also any woman employed by the federal government). In terms of addressing broader issues such as the usage of fetal tissue, which yet another congressional committee proposes to investigate, Schakowsky’s thinking is that advocates have to “pick off the low hanging fruit”. Politicians who have made a political calculation to oppose reproductive rights believing that will keep them in office need to be shown that there are many in their district who think otherwise, and can cost them their re-election. In our area, this translates into Patrick Meehan and possibly Fitzpatrick. We have elected a pro-choice state supreme court in PA. Proof that our votes counted!
6. Ongoing issues: gun safety, “Courts Matter” (lack of progress on federal judicial nominees), crisis of the millions of refugees (please contribute to HIAS) hunger in our own country...stay tuned!

Lynne Jacobs (L), NCJW Policy Advocate, and Rabbi Rachel Kobrin of Adath Jeshurun were speakers at an October 15 forum: Engaging Faith Communities/Ending Human Trafficking. They are pictured alongside NCJW's Trafficked Teens silhouettes that help bring public awareness to this issue.
